Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Situated on the west side of Berlin's South Main Street near the end of the residential area, the Bethard Cottage, currently serving as an office for an insurance agency, sits close to the street with a small front yard like many of its neighbors to the north and across the street. It was built c.1915 according to the owners.

The 1½ story frame bungalow with a large centered shed-roofed dormer is 3 bay by 3 bay, the entrance being located in the center bay. Two interior chimneys rise, one in the front slope of the roof on the south end, the other asymmetrically placed on the north rear slope of the gable roof. The raised foundation is brick with headers of a swirled yellow and red color creating a decorative effect. Windows throughout the house are 1/1.

A verandah extends across the front or east facade under the large gable roof. Brick columns with the previously mentioned decorative effect extend from the heavily articulated, boxed cornice to the ground. Brick steps rise in the center bay to the verandah. The off-center door is flanked by triple 1/1 windows in the 1st and 3rd bays.

The gable ends of the house have double 1/1 windows on the second floor with a one-story gable-roofed projection on the north facade forming a bay with three windows. The foundation of this projection contains a single sash basement window. Another occurs in the center of the rear facade foundation. A shed-roofed porch addition with a vertical wood siding enclosure projects to the rear.

Although the interior has had some changes in wall arrangement, most of the original interior doors, trim, mantel, floors, columns, etc. are intact and in excellent condition.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

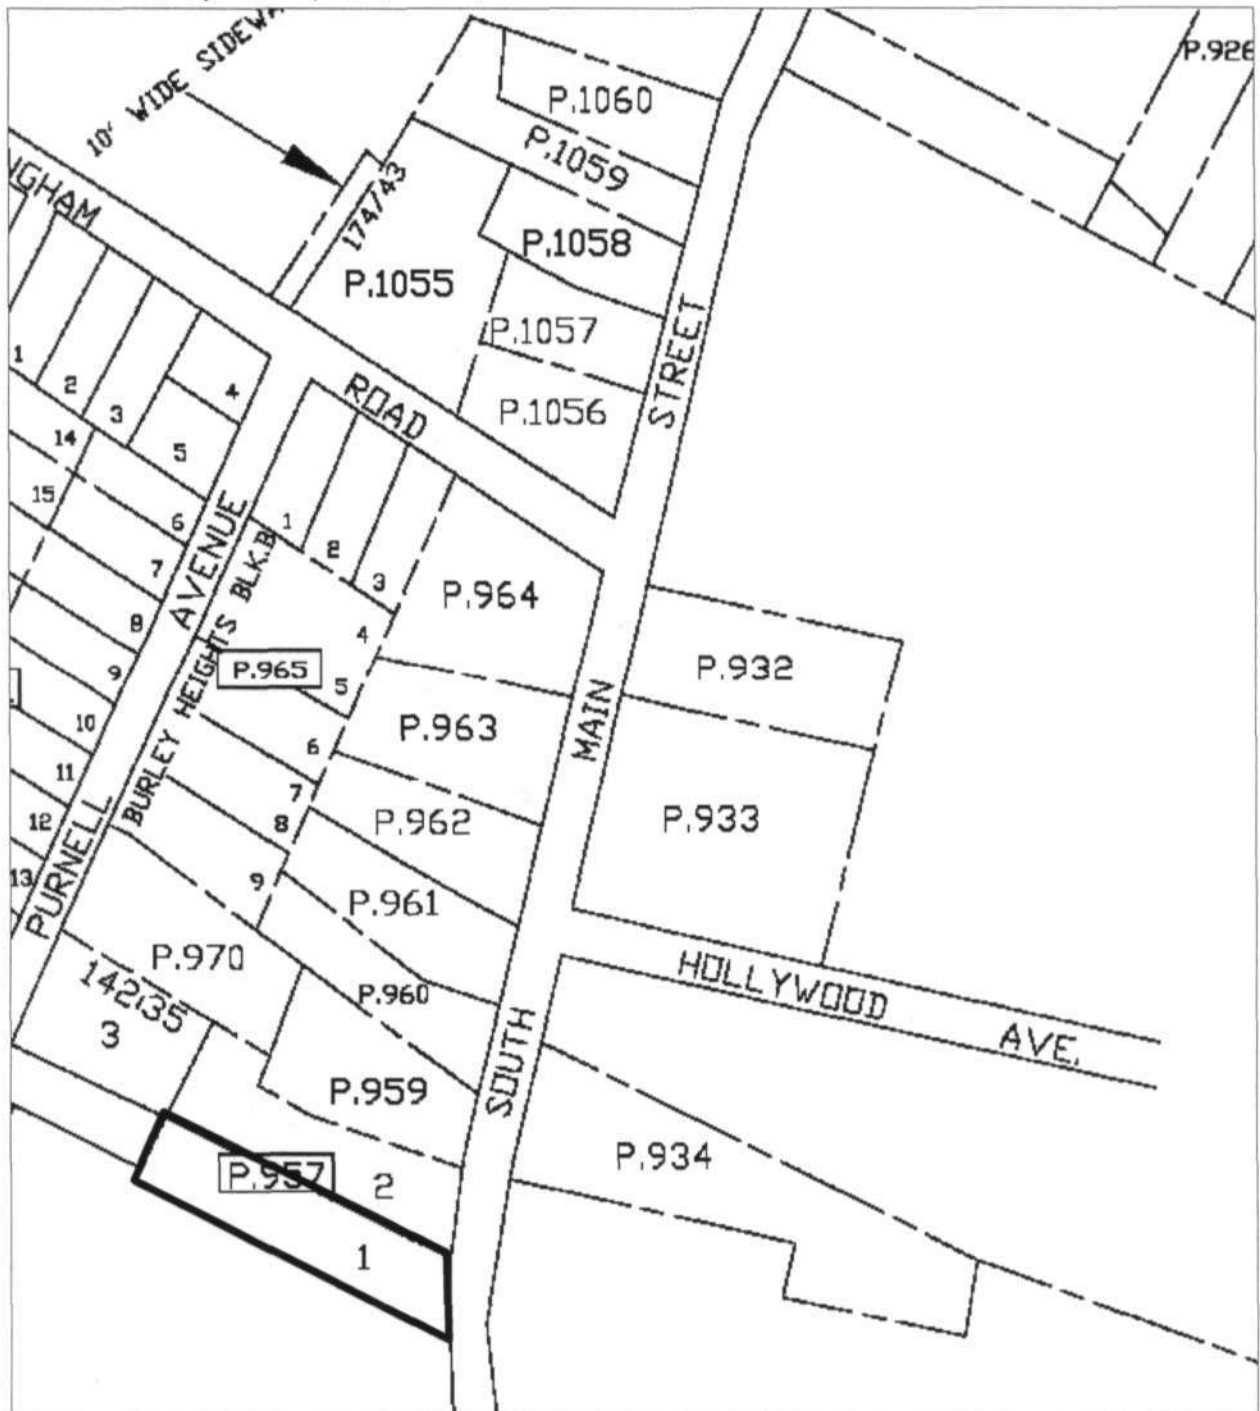

This early bungalow, typical of Berlin's houses in its positioning on the street, remains in a substantially unaltered state except for its asbestos siding. It is impressive in its substantial character and workmanship.
